Something Special

"Love, life," were the words of Judge Lesely Brooks Wells during her speech of opening convocation. Judge Wells spoke very optimistically about going to school, especially about going to Chatham.

And that's what students did, or tried to do. "Loving life" became a popular expression, but at times the words "I hate life" could be heard also. Keeping a time line for the tutorial, doing calculations for a Science and Technology lab, reading about yet another informative subject in West and the World, or writing a Concepts and Composition paper on Suday night tested everyone's love of life.

As student struggled (or cruised) through the first semester, there were quite a few diversions. Orientation not only involved the freshmen in school activities, but also entertained upperclasswomen before classes began. Orientation Coordinator, Lisa Savegnago, along with her committe and College Programs Director, Lori Varlotta, arranged to have a comedian from New York City on one of the nights of orientation. Nancy Parker succeeded in entertaining the students, but any boyfriends present had to take a little abuse.

Soon after the opening of school, Fall Fest and Parents' Weekend helped alleviate pressure of the semester. Parents' Weekend gave students the opportunity to catch up with family as well as dance the night away to George Gee's Make Believe Ballroom Band.

The holidays, althogh they brought the added pressures of exams, allowed students to relax a little at Christmas parties such as the Gateway Party and Fickes Egg Nog.

The events and others helped students relax and look back on the semester and realize that they did love life. They soon took back all the condemnations of life and found SOMETHING SPECIAL in academics as well as social events.
